

Announcing Advances in Mental Health

An Australian e-Journal for the Advancement of Mental Health

FROM THE DESK OF GRAHAM MARTIN OAM

Advances in Mental Health has launched in print and online as a global forum for advancing mental health promotion, prevention of mental illness and early intervention approaches to mental health.

A contemporary, peer-reviewed journal for mental health practitioners, researchers, students, lecturers, clinicians, nurses, social workers, mediators, counsellors, consumers, communicators and policy developers, Advances in Mental Health (ISSN 1837-4905) is now available in print and online.

In Advances in Mental Health researchers and practitioners from different disciplines, cultures and countries come together to achieve conceptual clarity and advances in the development, evaluation, and implementation of effective policy and customer strategies.

Articles, editorials and commentary from regional and international researchers, policy makers or practitioners in general issues alternate with special issues on research, policy and practice topics of immediate interest. Special issues scheduled over the next few years include:

- Migration and mental health
- Indigenous mental health
- Substance use and mental health
- Suicide prevention
- Promoting youth mental health through early intervention
- Recent advances in mental health promotion
- Mental health nursing

To my mind this is a very important journal for mental health. I commend it to you.

Welcome to the relaunched journal and thank you for participating in our growing subscriber community.

Yours sincerely,

Graham Martin OAM
Advances in Mental Health Editor in Chief
